

Wacky Website Hacks and Flaps

Thanks for Nothing!

Our hosting provider shut down our website without warning, the day before we were going to brief TechCrunch on a major new software release!

UH PARDON ME BUT WE REALLY NEED YOU TO COME BACK HERE!

Didn't Get the Memo

Our dev team didn't know we wanted an e-commerce website, so when the new site launched we couldn't sell anything. Next time we'll make sure IT and marketing are on the same page.

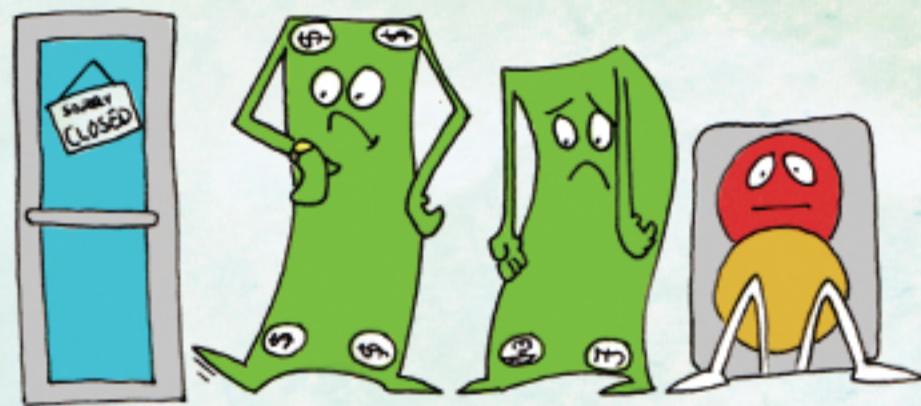

Oh THAT Guy!

My site was hacked by a famous Sri Lankan Wordpress hacker, who migrated our traffic to his Facebook page.

The Good News Is

My winery site was hacked and traffic redirected to a porn site. It took three days to fix... then it happened again! The upside was I figured out how many people were visiting my site due to the number of complaints I received!

Expensive Exposure

Our website got hacked and we were down for three days. It cost us $40,000 in sales.

Gangnam Style

I was hacked by some organization that appeared to be based out of southeast Asia. When you went to my site, you got this crazy scene from space accompanied by some creepy music

Where's the Undelete Button

I had a client that didn't like the way her file structure looked like on her website. She decided to do some cleanup work... and deleted a number of important files, including her image directory containing 50 subfolders of images. Good thing we had her backed up.

THANKS AGAIN!

Robin Hood Hacker

my website was defaced, but the hacker was nice enough to point out the security flaw and help me fix it.

YOU'VE GOT A WEAK SPOT RIGHT AROUND THE CHEST AREA

Here We Go Again

My website was hacked six times in three months. Basically hell in the cloud.

Mysterious Disappearing Website

One day we could not access our website. Our hosting company told me that our server was somehow empty. The site had disappeared completely overnight! No one could explain how this had happened.

